

Cory Biggerstaff began playing jazz in high school and attended the University of Nebraska in Lincoln where he received a degree in Music Education. After teaching for a year, he moved to Chicago to attend DePaul University where he received a Masters Degree in Jazz Performance. There he studied improvisation with faculty members who are some of the finest musicians in Chicago including bassist Kelly Sill, pianist Larry Novak, and guitarist Bob Palmeri. Since then Cory teaches privately as well as being the bass instructor at Harold Washington College and has been working as a freelance bassist around the Chicago area.